The Age of Fibs

stories memoir microlit

WINNER OF THE 2018 CARMEL BIRD DIGITAL LITERARY AWARD

Beth Spencer

Beth Spencer's award-winning collection crosses boundaries of genre, time, history and desire; meditating on how we create ourselves through culture and stories, and why it matters.

An Angel is suspended in protest beneath a forest-green canopy; a girl watches Bewitched and dreams of being part of a coven; a man struggles to wrest back control of his story; and the cast of Fatal Attraction is let loose on the streets of Newtown. Memories of football and class, museums, TV families, Barbie dolls, and growing up in the age of Fibs bras and the rise and fall of the Whitlam government.

From the author of the critically acclaimed How to Conceive of a Girl, this collection seamlessly interweaves past & future, the critical & nostalgic, the experimental & the intimate.

'Gives vivid insights into the small and large moments of the human story. It was a great pleasure to encounter this gem.' — Carmel Bird

'Spencer's work brims with energetic, provocative, and idiosyncratically stylish writing.' — Felicity Plunkett

'Consistently thought-provoking, compelling, and rich with humour and complexity.' — Magdalena Ball

Beth Spencer's previous books include How to Conceive of a Girl (Random House, 1996), which was runner-up for the Steele Rudd Award, and Vagabondage (UWAP, 2014), a verse memoir about a year living in campervan. Awards include The Dinny O'Hearn Fellowship, Varuna Writers fellowship, a CreateNSW grant, and several Fellowships from the Literature Board of the Australia Council. Her work has been performed widely on ABC-Radio National, and she is an occasional interviewer for Climactic podcast. She lives on Guringai land on the Central Coast of NSW, and can be found on social media @bethspen.
